

ANDREW MOORE

New Ways To Work Managing Director

LOCATION

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

EXPERTISE

Rengagement Strategies & Programs

Citywide Collaboratives

Cross-Sector Partnership Building

Strategic Planning

Public Policy At The Local, State & National Levels

EDUCATION

Fels Center of Government, University of Pennsylvania
M.P.A., Government Affairs
1994

Princeton University
B.A., Politics
1983

WORK EXPERIENCE

Director / Senior Fellow 2004–2026
National League of Cities Institute for Youth, Education, & Families

Consultant 2002–2007
Private Practice

Vice-President 1997–2002
The Corps Network (then known as National Association of Service and Conservation Corps)

Lead Researcher 1983-1986
Center for Study of Responsive Law / The Big Boys book project for Pantheon Press

ABOUT ME

Andrew O. Moore, Managing Director of the National Reengagement Initiative, served from 2012-2026 as Director, Youth and Young Adult Connections at the National League of Cities' Institute for Youth, Education and Families, where he had also worked as a Senior Fellow since 2004. The YEF Institute operated as a foundation-funded "action tank" helping municipal leaders implement practical solutions on behalf of children, youth, and families. Drawing support from several national foundations, Moore's recent roles with the Institute included:

- Overseeing an initiative to enlist cities more fully in the growing movement to connect children to nature, in conjunction with the Children & Nature Network;
- Supporting the growth of a national network of Dropout Reengagement Centers and spreading practical lessons learned through his book, Reengagement: Bringing Students Back to America's Schools (Rowman and Littlefield, 2016); and
- Leading explorations of municipal leadership roles in juvenile justice system reform, jail use reduction, and reimagining community safety.

Earlier, at the organization now known as The Corps Network, Moore spent 15 years building the nationwide network of service and conservation corps. He holds degrees from Princeton University and the University of Pennsylvania's Fels Institute of Government, and was one of six Atlantic Fellows in Public Policy in the United Kingdom in 2000-2001.

LET'S ENSURE THAT ALL YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE CONNECTIONS, CREDENTIALS, AND PATHWAYS TO FUTURE SUCCESS.

New Ways to Work