ABOUT ME

Charneece Fraticelli is an education-focused program coordinator and administrative professional with over 15 years of experience supporting at-promise and opportunity youth across California's career-technical education and grant-funded programs. As Senior RAPSA Program Coordinator and former CTE Program Coordinator at SIATech, she has led multi-day policy forums, coordinated statewide grant compliance reporting, and built lasting partnerships between schools, community colleges, and workforce organizations. Her work blends hands-on program management with a deep commitment to creating safe, supportive pathways for students — combining strong organizational systems with genuine care for the communities she serves. In continued efforts to bring apprenticeship opportunities to students located in Southern California though the California Opportunity Youth Apprenticeship grant that focuses on Substance Use Disorder (SUD) Counseling. Charneece works on special projects within this grant.

Charneece's career began in direct youth services — as a Direct Care Counselor managing case records for at-risk residents, and in afterschool and recreation programs supporting children's academic and social development. That early grounding in child welfare and education continues to shape her approach today: every program she runs is built around the belief that young people thrive when the adults around them are organized, present, and genuinely invested in their success. She brings the same care to her board and stakeholder relationships, treating every district administrator, educator, and community partner as part of a shared mission to expand opportunity for the next generation.
