ABOUT ME

I am a workforce development, grants management, compliance, and strategic planning professional with more than 25 years of experience supporting public agencies, nonprofits, educational institutions, workforce boards, and community-based organizations.

My expertise includes grant writing, grant management, program compliance, public agency procurement platforms, workforce development system design, youth development, strategic planning, procurement management, program implementation, performance management, and organizational capacity building. I have successfully managed federal, state, county, city, foundation, and corporate-funded initiatives focused on workforce development, economic mobility, education, youth services, health equity, and community development.

As a consultanr with New Ways to Work, I support workforce development systems, project management, strategic planning, policy development, implementation planning, procurement processes, organizational assessments, and technical assistance initiatives that improve outcomes for youth, young adults, and underserved communities.

In addition to my consulting work, I provide grant management, compliance monitoring, grant writing, program evaluation, and business consulting services through my own practice. I specialize in helping organizations secure funding, strengthen operations, improve compliance, and develop sustainable systems that support long-term growth and impact.

I TURN BOLD IDEAS INTO SUSTAINABLE PARTNERSHIPS, IMPACTFUL PROGRAMS, AND MEASURABLE RESULTS
